Chapter 1 by Alex S

The Spark

It all began with a bang, I didn't quite understand how, but it was an explosion from, nothing at all. It began from a space the size of an atom, it was practically nothing, and now, it was the entirety of the universe, it was now everything we knew, everything we could see was the size of a single atom thirty Quintilian years ago. And as every day passed, the next explosion grew closer, the inevitable destruction of the universe, or perhaps the birth of a new one, was only two hundred thirty two years away. As the day approached, we prepared, We had placed colonies on nearly five thousand two hundred ninety two planets, and now, we were all doomed. How did we know, The Spark, an almighty energy source we used to power our civilization of over thirty five sextillion people. It was the opposite of a black hole, nothing got to it, and anything six miles away from it was pushed back twelve miles, and anything close to it, within a meter if it is not contained, is spaghettified, the same effect as in a black hole. This energy took us a billion years to learn how to harness, after we mastered the gravity in a black hole. People bustled in and out of the shops along the road, they didn't know, only the employees of STRI, Space Tech Research Institute, knew what was coming. Every human being on every one of our planets were doomed, they were all dead, there was no escape now, it was too late, our population was too big. There was a way using The Spark, that we could escape, but only with one solar system, humans would be severely decreased. Our plan was to evacuate the same solar system. We would harness the energy around the solar system until another implosion happened, and a new universe was formed. We would collect human eggs and if things go wrong we will re-colonize, the same way we form a colony on another planet, as we have done on over six thousand planets. Once a new universe is formed, we will shoot pods with two thousand eggs each to other planets, and recolonize the new universe.

200 years later

We had collected enough energy for one solar system to be protected for over thirty three sextillion years. And as we passed the hundred day count till doom, we told the people. Riots happened, everywhere, everything went into chaos, police cruisers were everywhere, always deployed, protecting The Spark. We moved the spark into capital space, we could sap energy from it to power life support systems, but the rest would go to generating the mini universe. The riots had gotten worse, and larger, almost every colony had turned, all trying to get into capital space, trying to survive. We had had to send in troops to “subdue” many. two days left, we had lost over two hundred law enforcement ships, and expended half of our military fighting off invaders, we killed our own so humans would live through the doom. This was it, the day, the doom, the test of how powerful The Spark truly was. As the implosion started, we powered the universe generator, as we watched the planets, the stars, everything disappear, our sphere of life held, we lived, we lived on for two sextillion years, until the next explosion.
